Institute Was Closed Today

Following the report of A. J. White, Edna Long and Mary Gregg, the committee on resolutions, the fourth annual session of the Monessen Teachers' institute was brought to a close at noon today. The four days this week of which the institute has been in progress have proven most interesting and inspiring not only to the teachers but to the numerous patrons of the school who availed themselves of the opportunity to hear the noted lectures.

The four evening entertainments have also proven of great benefit to the community and with the final number last evening, the lecture on "Day Dreams" by L. B. Wiskersham, gave to the public the best combination of concert and lecture work ever presented in this city by any lyceum bureau.

A. W. Johns rendered two well selected solos at the evening entertainment and the High school orchestra furnished several selections. At the session this morning Dr. William D. Henderson gave an interesting lecture on "The Imagination and Abuse" and Superintendent Orton Lowe of the Pittsburgh schools spoke on "Teaching Languages in the Grades."

CHRISTMAS IS COMING

With the approach of the holiday season, the children's thoughts naturally turn to Santa Claus and the good things he will bring them. Naturally candy is the first thing they think of and the parents should give this deeq consideration. Don't buy candy unless you are sure it is pure and wholesome. Make your purchases at the Philadelphia Candy Kitchen, the Home of Purity, where you get the largest selection and everything is home made. We ask you to remember us before you make your purchases. 1t

Form Auxilliary To Board Of Trade

The Board of Trade has been greatly strengthened by the organization of a woman's auxilliary which will be devoted to assisting in all civic work that can be aided by the efforts of the women.

This was accomplished upon the request of the president of the Board of Trade and the Civic committee. The organization was effected May 11 last under the name of the Womans Civic club of Monessen. This club was reorganized October first to form the Monessen Federation of Womans clubs which will include all the ladies organizations that wish to affiliate.

The object of this federation is to strengthen by efficient organization the individual efforts of the women of Monessen to aid in civic work and to advance the best interests of the community in every way possible and to assist all civic bodies and committees in carrying on their work.

The activities of this organization will be under the direction of the officers and an executive board of control, each organization belonging to the federation selecting one member to represent it on the board of control.

The following organizations now form the Federation.

Child Welfare Club, represented by Mrs. G. F. Wright.

Womans club of Monessen, represented by Mrs. C. L. Schuck.

Coterie club, by Mrs. Carrol Bolig.

Narcissus club, by Mrs. A. W. Davis.

Needlecraft club, by Mrs. B. F. Weston.

Ladies' Catholic Benevolent association, by Mrs. John Murphy.

Ladies' Hospital Auxiliary, by Mrs. J. J. Cushing.

Ancient Order of Hibernians, by Mrs. W. C. Englé.

American Insurance Union, by Mrs. John C. Hussy.

Hebrew Ladies' Aid, by Mrs. Harry Lebowitz.

The total membership is 329. The officers are:

Pres.—Mrs. John S. Duvall.
Vice Pres.—Mrs. H. E. Gress
Sec'y.—Mrs. G. H. Thomas.
Treas.—Mrs. J. J. Cushing.

One of the first duties that will fall upon the federation will be the sale of the Red Cross Christmas stamps, which fund goes toward fighting the great white plague. Seventy-seven per cent. of the proceeds will go to the federation and will be appropriated to the Monessen tent at the Mont Alto tuberculosis sanitorium to carry on the work there.

A. J. LHOTA SLIPS UP AHEAD IN SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

Which ones on this list of the Daily Independent will win that Overland touring car, Lester piano, diamond ring, grafanolo and diamond stick pin?

Which one will you be? You can be which ever you will. Maybe the winner is not nominated yet. Maybe you are the winner and maybe your name is not on the list yet? If not, there will never be a better time to put it there than today. Remember yesterday is past, today is short and tomorrow may never come.

Get in on this great opportunity list today and start gathering up the subscriptions of your friends and acquaintances. They will all vote for you once you have declared to them that you have a little spark of ambition on your own account.

MOST IMPORTANT WEEK OF ALL

By the way, this is the most important week of all. This is the week when things are just starting. This week there is the big 50,000 extra vote coupons for each club of $10 subscriptions that you turn in.

Get just as many of those big coupons as you possibly can. You will need them all. Do not worry about what you think you should do. Take advantage of this big important week while there is time.

A club of $10 will yield you 50,000 extra votes, as well as the regular subscription votes, and you will win the trick. Turn your little trick today. Then turn another tomorrow and all the other tomorrows while they last.

And here is the offer in detail:

50,000 EXTRA VOTES FOR EVERY CLUB OF TEN DOLLARS TURNED IN UP TO 10 P. M., DEC. 4th

Every contestant, who brings or sends in $10 in new or old, large or small subscriptions, between the start of the contest and Saturday, Dec. 4th, at 10 o'clock in the evening will be given a voting coupon of 50,000 extra votes in addition to the regular number of votes allowed for each subscription. The time is short, so you see you must get right to work, otherwise the offer will be of no help to you.

Remember you are not compelled to bring or send in the $10 in one lump sum. For instance you may bring in $5.00 today, $3.00 tomorrow and so on. A careful record of every dollar turned in during this clubbing offer will be kept and as soon as the contestant has a club of $10, the extra votes will be issued to the contestant.

This offer is open to all contestants and you can easily see that by a little work you can outstrip your competitors and gain the lead.

There is no limit to this voting offer—each contestant can earn as many of these voting coupons for extra votes as possible.

Subscriptions should not be held back until Dec. 4th, but turned in as fast as received.

CONCERNING FUTURE EXTRA VOTE OFFERS TO BE MADE

In every contest there are extra or bonus vote offers from time to time and there will be extra vote offers in this campaign. But a subscription turned in at the beginning of the campaign will be counted on this vote offer. This plan safeguards the interests of all candidates who work. People will tell you to wait until the last because there will be bigger vote offers announced. This is untrue of this contest for more votes will be given during this present extra vote offer than any other time in this campaign.

Many Stars Will Take Part In Game

Great interest is being manifested in the football game to be played at Page park tomorrow afternoon between the Scholastics and Crescents for the light weight championship of the Monongahela valley. The two teams are holding daily practice and will present the strongest lineups of the season. The Crescents have secured the services of Jimmy McNeil, formerly coach of the Waynesburg college team, while Elgie Tobin, the famous State college star and coach for the West Virginia college team, will coach the Scholastics.

Both teams have several hundred followers and no doubt they will turn out in full force tomorrow to cheer their favorites to victory. The proceeds of the game will be used towards defraying the expenses of several of the players who were injured during the season. This is especially true of McCreary, the Scholastic full back, who was confined to the Memorial hospital on account of a broken shoulder bone. The game will be called promptly at 3:30 and the following lineup will probably be presented by the respective teams:

Scholastics		Crescents

Young Boys Face Burgess

Probably the youngest prisoner that ever faced Burgess Dunlap appeared in police court this morning in the person of Robert Calderoni, aged 5 years, who in company with his brother Joseph, Tony Debondo, Louis Severn, Andy Jacobs and Joseph Gnip were charged with taking a number of sacks belonging to Contractor Smallwood and selling them.

The oldest of the prisoners hardly reached the age of 12 and each one took his turn in telling just how they came to be implicated in the affair. From their testimony the ring leaders of the gang, John Laboka and Andy Donuts had failed to make their appearance at the hearing and the case was postponed until 8 o'clock this evening.

Samuel McCarty of Cumberland, Md., John Wasochrok of Third street and John Moreanz of Twelfth street, faced the burgess on a charge of drunkenness. It was their first appearance and all three were discharged.

Borough Won Case

The local law suit which has been on trial the past two days in Greensburg was given to the jury at noon yesterday and the jury returned with their verdict at 6 o'clock last evening. The borough made some improvements in the way of paving and asked that Axil Ruuti pay $303 as his share of the benefits. The defendant claimed that he was damaged to the amount of $350 to his property and instead of being assessed for improvements asked that the borough pay him for the damage to his property.

Quite a number of borough officials were attending court and testified in the case which was tried before Judge Charles D. Copeland. Attorney James S. Beacom addressed the jury in behalf of the defendant and Attorney Adam M. Wyant addressed the jury in behalf of the plaintiff. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the borough, disputing Ruuti's claim for $350 damages and assessing him $225.71 as his share of the benefits.

Now is the Time

The great interest that is being manifested in our subscription contest has far exceeded all expectations. The contestants are working in earnest to capture the Overland touring car which is the grand prize, and everyone seems to be doing a quite effective work that is bound to run the number of votes high in the millions. As matters now stand each contestant has an equal chance of winning.

At this time, however, it might be well to state to the merchant who is contemplating a campaign of publicity for holiday business that the Independent covers the local field like the dew. There are few homes that the paper does not visit and at the close of this contest it is doubtful if there will be a single house not visited by the paper.

This means that from eight to ten thousand people read the paper daily and out of a population of twenty thousand which includes children, this is about reaching the limits of possibility. So it behooves the merchant who is progressive and who wants to spend his money to the best advantage to use these columns as a means of carrying his daily messages to the people.

Postal cards, bills, circulars and personal appeals are absolutely inferior as a means of publicity to the newpaper and they are far more expensive. The Independent intends to develop the local field to the best advantage regardless of cost, and we solicit the help of our merchants, business men and the public in general and if given the proper support, we pledge curselves to give the best service consistent with the patronage accorded.

The hustle and the hurry of the holiday season is upon us and in three week hence Christmas will be here. Our Christmas number will appear in less than two weeks and we want the merchants who care for space to get their copy in early so we can get the paper out in good shape and do justice to all concerned.

A New Leadership

The nominating committee of the Board of Trade have the matter before them of recommending officers for the coming year. It is a duty that requires the wisest judgment, and the broadest and best man that can be found should be placed at the head of this organization. It takes time and sacrifice in a personal way, but the town could hardly afford to get along without a civic body since so much has been accomplished within the past few years. When this body was organized Monessen had no way in and no way out but over hopeless highways. New roads had to be built and property acquired over which to build. All of this has been accomplished and we have built well and built permanently. There was no connecting link between the two hills where have been built the most substantial homes. Today a bridge spans the chasm and one of which there is no better or substantial in the land. People are using it to great advantage. It too, is a monument to the enterprise of the Board of Trade. There are other improvements, maybe not equally great but surely equally important that could be mentioned, but what's the use to take the space.

The Board of Trade must live despite its carpers and critics and it must continue to do good work. It will continue its efficiency and good men will always come forward and make some personal sacrifice for their community and let us help them instead of standing back and criticizing and finding fault. If there is anything wrong, have the manhood to go to the front and talk it over, help to boost the organization along. The nominating committee will do its best and we trust that the men who are decided upon to move things the coming year, will accept gracefully and do their work determinedly and no less willingly.

TWENTY-SECOND INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER LXXVI.

The Treasure.

Deep within that chamber of horrors which before now had smitten the souls of both with terror, two persons were bending over in the light of the candles, which gave a faint illumination.

"It is here," said Count Frederick, glancing at the little compass which he had brought with him. "The north east lies there—it is yonder, where sists yonder skeleton in the iron chair! That was the last guard of the king"

"What shall we do?" gasped Kitty Gray. "I dare not."

"Nonsense! my dear. Fear?—why should we feel fear? Yonder friend of ours has kept the place well and safely—seated there in his iron chair waiting so long—for us!"

Kitty Gray, pale and disturbed, still feeling a woman s terror at these grim scenes about her, spoke with solemnity in her tones "He was waiting for liberty and justice, Sir Frederick," said she "He shall have them We will give all these Christian burial—shall we not?"

"Whatever you wish shall be done," said Count Frederick. "Yes, we will take all these poor victims away to their last rest and let them lie in peace. I shall seal up this cavern here"

"But come," he said; and so laid a hand on the grinning guest in the iron chair. The bony frame was confined upright by metal bands which supported it. He found the ancient chair heavy to move, but applying his great strength, at length, gently as he could, he shifted it to one side On the floor of the chamber, formerly beneath the iron chair, there showed dimly in the dust the outline of a steel plate, an iron ring welded to its center. Count Frederick pointed. "This is the place," said he, with conviction. "It was guarded well. See here—I doubt not this is the lid which covers what is below."

Yet even his strength failed to remove the covering. He found at last a part of an old bar, pushed it through the ring and put his strength to it. A faint dust arose, the lid yielded slowly, and at last fell back with a clang upon the rocky floor. At the edge of this newly made aperture there showed the edge of another plate, close fitting.

"It runs farther," exclaimed Count Frederick. "See—look what is below!"

Kitty, overcoming her terror, bent forward with him to gaze down. "Yes, it is here," said she. "But look how much there is!"

"Softly," said her companion. "Let us open this cavern more widely. Here is the grave of a giant treasure—I had not dreamed what really it was."

Carefully he pushed in and under the edge of the bar, removing plate after plate of that which had been the covering of the treasure place. Below this, they saw a cavity filled with steel receptacles Each was locked, clamped and banded, tight against all intrusion.

"What is here?" said Count Frederick. "Are we baffled even at the last?"

Kitty Gray cast the rays of her light here and there about her in the cavernous interior. By chance her eyes rested—indeed were drawn, fascinated, to the skeleton which sat bent forward in the iron chair A dull gleam of something like metal caught her eye.

"Look," said she, and pointed. There, fastened by a metal band to the wrist was a key—it was half hidden between the bones of the forearm.

"Look," said Count Frederick, and held it up before her "Cunning enough was the man who hid this treasure, and yet he left it plain for those he meant to find it."

He stooped and tried the key in the lock of the central chest of those which lay below. The next moment he had flung back the lid.

Their eyes rested upon what would have made glad the heart of any buccaneer. Gold, countless pieces of gold!

It was the lost treasure of the king!

They stood, awed, spellbound and looked down at what they saw

"But look yonder," said Kitty, plucking at his sleeve—her hand had grasped it comfortably for many moments now, for she took comfort in the touch even of his clothing, the presence of the bulk of his body near her. "Look, Sir Frederick," said she, "what is that in this chest below?",

He bent over, casting down the gleams of his little light. What he saw was a long package of folded parchments thrust down at the side of the chest. Gently he drew it out and held it in his hands for a moment, regarding it curiously.

"I shall not open it!" said he. "With you, I feel a certain fear. I believe here is something come down to us out of the past—some message from the king. If this be so, it belongs not to me, but to the people. It must go before their duly constituted rulers."

CHAPTER LXXVII.

The Reckoning.

"Now," said Count Frederick to Kitty when at length they had reached the upper portion of the palace, "we must advance to what remains yet to be done The ministers must be summoned. The writs must issue for the attendance of the parliament. 'Tis long since one has been convened. Michael the king—he alone has been our government—and what a government!"

They were now passing toward the central portion of the palace, having ascended from the vaults below. Absorbed—intent—Count Frederick, at least, was inattentive to aught else save the presence of the woman at his side. But now she plucked his sleeve.

"Listen!" said she, and laid a finger on her lips.

At her signal, Count Frederick softened his footsteps and walked with her stealthily. The sound of the voices engaged in whispered conversation came now to his ears. Suddenly he stepped forward, convinced, flung open a door off the main hall, and passed within unannounced. It was no time for formalities in Gretzhoffen palace now.

"So,' said he, "you are here again. What, Sachio, you honor us yet by another visit? That is most kind of you! You, Grahame, you, my former bodyguard—here with this arch traitor, this liar, this treacherous snake!"

They stood, surprised as yet without plan for their defense.

"Ho, there!—the guard—the guard," cried Count Frederick, stepping back to the door.

But to his call there came no footsteps of the guard. Instead, one man came—Roleau, who for the past few moments had been in search of the two men. He hastened past Kitty as she stood, thrust himself into the room, and with Count Frederick, faced the trapped men who stood before them.

Count Sachio, with a snarl of rage, sprang forward at his foe, and Roleau, with a quick motion flung himself between. He felt the iron hand of his master on his shoulder.

"Leave him to me Roleau! Take care of the other man."

The two noblemen faced one another calmly now Not so with Roleau. On the instant, he flung himself upon the man accosted as Grahame. The struggle was unequal and under Roleau's powerful grasp the intruder soon was helpless.

"Well," said Count Frederick; "Sachio, how shall it be? Shall I choke you with my hands?"

There are Other Monessen People Similarly Situated

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Monessen residents? After you have read the following, quetly answer the question.

Mrs. W. Koerner, 119 Knox avenue, Monessen. says: "I had a bad fall which injured my back. I suffered from a constant pain across my loins and in the morning I was always worse. If I stooped, a sharp pain caught me and I couldn't straighten. The secretions from my kidneys were unnatural and caused me annoyance. I didn't rest well and rheumatic pains made it hard for me to get about. I was often so lame that I had to sit on one cushion and I had puffy sacs beneath my eyes. I doctored and tried different medicines, but got no relief. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills procured at the Hirsch Drug Co. drove away most of the trouble. I take this medicine off and on as a kidney tonic and it keeps me in good health."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Koerner had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

meets on the steamer two men outcasts and they all conspire against the world. Jeanne becomes notorious as a scheming and heartless woman and the epithet "Vampire" is applied to her. She has ruined many men whom she run across, but last she meets a young American attache of the American legation and after securing valuable documents from him, she finds she is in love with him. One of her co-conspirators whom she met on the steamer, comes into possession of one of the secret papers and when trying to get the papers back to return to the attache, Jeanne discovers that the young attache is the son of the man responsible for her ruin. Her old hate is awakened again.

Events bring all back to New York. Complications involve Jeanne with both the father and the son and the young man's fiance. The young man breaks his engagement, declares his love for Jeanne and his father is forced to give his consent to the marriage.

A very, very dramatic scene is introduced when the father discovers that Jeanne is none other than the woman he illegally married and divorced. The father accuses Jeanne of being an adventuress. She wrings from him a confession before his son that he had deceived her. The son throws convention to the winds and decides to marry Jeanne. Then another dramatic scene develops and you realize the big heart and sacrifice of Jeanne, sacrificing herself for the sake of the young man and his fiance. Realizing that she can never avoid the destiny, what is to be, will be, the young man loving her with all his heart. The "Vampire's" last words to him were "Love the girl you first loved and forget the Vampire." The Vampire is now dead, by the circumstances she became a sinner. Tell us again the chapter of our Bible "He who is without sin, let him cast the first stone." It is a great moral lesson, all the way through. 1t
